A report by Ayo Onatola on the public presentation of the book, OBAFEMI AWOLOWO AND THE MAKING OF REMO: THE LOCAL POLITICS OF ANIGERIAN NATIONALIST by Insa Nolte, which was held in London recently.

The event, which was anchored by Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.

The event was held in the lecture hall of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute in the United States of America. The publishers were overwhelmed to see all the copies of the book bought and not able to meet the demand for the book.

The event was opened by the Executive Director of the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, together with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation.

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, General Editor, African Studies (SOAS), Russell Square, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo International African Institute, London, in collaboration with the Obafemi Awolowo Foundation, was accompanied by a few colleagues from her University, together with her father, Prof Hans Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green. Heinrich Nolte and husband, Prof Simon Green.